As the campfire dies down, one couples desire is just heating up. Whispering Cove, Book 10 Sun, sand, water and cold beer is just what construction worker Devon Taylor is looking for. The first beach party of the season means fun pickins for a bachelor, especially when a volleyball-playing, redheaded beauty in a teeny tiny string bikini captures his attention. When he learns shes the sister of a soon-to-be-married friend, in town two weeks early to help with the wedding, his hopes for a wild night locked in her arms are dashed. Real estate developer Sahara Caan is a woman not to be ignored. She knows whator rather, whomshe wants, and tonight she is hell bent on getting the sexy bachelor out of his swimming trunks and into her bed. What can Devon say? After all, hes just a man. Their night spent together is earthshattering. Who knew that a laid-back construction worker could so thoroughly turn her world upside-down? But when their different lives clash and good intentions turn sour, it will take a miracle to keep their love nailed together. Warning: Contains one sworn bachelor and a career-minded woman who refuses to deny their bodies desires. Sparks could rival Fourth of July fireworks, so protective eyewear is recommended.
